He also reported that the results of the departmental examinations in the public school were very good, and that a percentage of 79 passes, based on the unit system had been obtained in the high school.

The Board then adjourned.

LOCAL NOTES

Mr. Bob McAllister, of Calgary, was visiting Mr. and Mrs. Jack Cruise over the week end.

Miss Phyllis Kent of Airdrie, left on Sunday's train to take up her studies at the university of British Columbia.

Mrs. John Harrison of Battleville has purchased a new Chev. truck for the hauling of the grain this season.

PLEASANT WHIST DRIVE

Lodge No. 90 of the Order of Dekan Grotto inaugurated their winter series of whist parties last week when a real nice crowd was on hand to enjoy a very pleasant time. Play ran into good scores, and at the close of play refreshments were served.

In addition to the evening prizes which were won by Mesdames C. Home, A. Girard, and Messrs A. Williams and H. Stewart, it was noted at the close of the six months' season to present grand aggregate prizes for the whole series of drives. In this manner all scores will be kept, and the highest scorer (lady and gent) at the close will receive a very valuable prize apiece. This will undoubtedly stimulate the interest in these parties which are to be held monthly.

B. C. STONE TO BE USED IN C. N. R. VANCOUVER HOTEL

British Columbia stone will be used throughout in the construction of the Canadian National Hotel, the new hotel now under construction in Vancouver according to Walter Pratt, General Manager, C.N.R. Hotels, who is now in Western Canada.

The decision of the Railway to use British Columbia stone in this tremendous building project will be received with great enthusiasm locally. It will be one of the largest stone contracts ever let to Canadian quarry and will mean a direct move on the part of the company to contribute its share in the industrial development of the province. The manufacture of the stone will involve 75 to 80 per cent of labor and, thereby will considerably assist in relieving the unemployment situation. This follows the policy of the Canadian National Railways to endeavor to use local products wherever it is economically possible.

The stone will be taken from Haddington Island, 250 miles north of Vancouver on the British Columbia coast, the contract having been awarded to J. A. and C. H. McDonald. Although in the 20-story structure, 130,000 yards of stone will be used.

MRS. PILKINGTON DIES AT RIPE OLD AGE

WAS RESIDENT OF GILT EDGE DISTRICT FOR SOME TIME PAST

Mary Helen, the beloved wife of William Pilkington, who lives on Ninth Avenue west, passed away on Saturday evening last after a illness of a few weeks, the cause of death being heart failure. The deceased lady was in her 73rd year.

Born in Lancashire, England, the late Mrs. Pilkington came to Canada in 1911, and settled with her family in Wainwright, later moving to the Gilt Edge district. Some time after they went to Mountain Park, Alta., but for the past month the deceased lady and her husband have again been living here.

Until her last sickness the deceased had enjoyed fairly good health, and had always been a great helpmate to her husband and splendid mother to her family.

There are left to mourn in addition to her husband, two daughters, Mrs. Joe Carroll, of Wainwright and Mrs. T. Francis of Clyde, Alta., and one son, Richard, there are in addition five grandchildren living.

THE FUNERAL was held on Monday afternoon at St. Thomas' church, where the vicar Rev. A. M. Treadell, conducted the beautiful service as set out in the Anglican church ritual. During the service "Abe with me" and "Peace, perfect peace" were sung by the numerous congregation who attended to pay their last respects and sympathies.

The pallbearers were Messrs T. Lismore, W. Arkwright, R. Tierney, W. Bibby, Mr. D. Dundas and H. Ward, Jr.

Among the beautiful offerings and tributes were: Wreaths from "The Family," Mr. and Mrs. T. Lismore, Mr. and Mrs. W. Whittle, Gladys and Jim, Mr. and Mrs. W. Arkwright, Mr. and Mrs. D. Dundas and others.

Interment was at Wainwright and McLeod's parlors carried out the arrangements.

CARD OF THANKS

Mr. Wm. Pilkington and family wish to express their heartfelt thanks for the many kind expressions of sympathy and floral tributes during their recent sad bereavement occasioned by the passing of the late Mrs. Pilkington, and also for kindness and enquiries during the deceased's last illness.

HERD LAW NOW IN FORCE GRIZZLY BEAR M.D.

It will be well to remember that at their last meeting the municipal council of Grizzly Bear gave final reading and passage to their new Stock Bylaw; there being no objection from the ratepayers whatever. This means that the bylaw becomes effective five days later, and that stock at large is now limited to 15 head for each 160 acres, and from April 1st to December 1st.

SPENDING MONEY IN CANADA

One hundred million dollars is a large sum and by spending more than 90 per cent of this money in Canada the Canadian National Railways are doing something more than serving the people of the Dominion with adequate transportation. They are serving the industries of Canada in no small measure and, thereby, giving employment to tens of thousands of artisans, clerks and workers who benefit greatly from the tremendous purchasing power of the National System from year to year.

BOOKLET ON RURAL HIGH SCHOOLS ISSUED

DEPT. SEEK TO ENCOURAGE RURAL SECONDARY EDUCATION

Published primarily for the guidance of the rural school trustee but of equal great interest to parents who are seeking secondary school education for their children, is a booklet recently issued by the department of education at Edmonton, entitled "Rural High Schools in Alberta." It is some 26 pages in length and gives facts and figures relating to rural high schools already in operation in the province and also the prospects for the formation of others in the future.

Dealing first with the need of advanced education, the booklet gives the conditions and difficulties peculiar to the rural high school and some suggestions as to how they may be overcome. A particularly interesting section is devoted to the consolidated rural high schools of which there are now 16 in operation in the province.

Average Cost

The average cost of such schools, the department states, is $2,500, one third of which is paid by the provincial government in grants. The cost to the taxpayer is approximately $5 per year.

The procedure leading to formation of such a school is also explained and the position of the department is made clear as to the exact financial aid which is given.

Among the beautiful floral tributes which covered the casket were: Wreaths, The Family; wreath, Fellow Trustees of St. Luke's (A. Dupre, H. Mosier, J. A. McKinnis and G. Petrie); wreath, A. Zehnder and E. Wilson and crew; and sprays from Mr. and Mrs. T. McDougall, Mr. and Mrs. A. C. McDougall, The Sominic Family, Mr. and Mrs. Nick Houpelek, and others.

The acting as pallbearers were Messrs H. Mosier, T. Bission, J. Welch, R. Tierney, L. O'Reilly, and E. Grogan.

Confirming preliminary plans announced at the last session of the legislature, Premier J. E. Brownlee on Friday announced that the machinery set up for the administration of the natural resources which will be returned to Alberta by the Dominion government on Oct. 1 next, there would be five branches, each under a supervisor responsible to the head of the department.

These five branches will be along the lines of those under which the Dominion has carried on its work, namely, mines, lands, fisheries, forestry and waterpower.

Insofar as the mines are concerned there still remain some details to be worked out, but for the most part the Premier said, organization has been completed.

There is a possibility that the mines branch may have two supervisors instead of one, in which case one would exercise supervision over home-owned and school lands and the other over Dominion and provincial land titles branches, which will be joined.

Some changes will be made in the method of granting homesteads but until the Legislature again convenes the passing of the new act, grants of homesteads will make, granting of homesteads will be confined to a specified tract set apart for the purpose.

Curtailed of waterpowers branch personnel probably will be made as a provincial branch already exists for administering water rights.

OLD TIMER PASSES ON SATURDAY LAST SUDDEN ILLNESS

WELL-KNOWN GREENSHIELDS FARMER PASSES AWAY DESTITUTE ALL

There passed away on Saturday afternoon last at the hospital another well-known farmer of our district in the person of Mr. Michael Molten, who was in his 56th year.

The deceased, who was a highly-respected and hard-working farmer, Greenfields, while at work on the binder on Thursday last, was seized with a sudden attack of acute peritonitis. He went to the house in great pain from the attack and was immediately rushed into town and taken to the hospital where an operation was at once performed to give the patient relief.

The relief sought was obtained, but the deceased's general health was such that he could not stand the shock from the operation and later on he purchased his well-known holdings at Greenfields where he farmed until his death; always proving very successful at his chosen occupation.

He leaves to mourn besides his widow, six daughters and two sons, as well as four brothers residing in Montana, one of whom was present at the funeral services.

The funeral services were held at St. Luke's church, of which the deceased was an official member, on Tuesday at noon, the ceremony being conducted by Rev. Father Doyle. The church was crowded with sympathizers and friends, who listened with rare attention to the solemn rites of the funeral mass.

The long funeral procession later wound its way to the Wainwright C. C. cemetery where interment took place under the direction of McLeod's funeral parlors.

Among the beautiful floral tributes which covered the casket were: Wreaths, The Family; wreath, Fellow Trustees of St. Luke's (A. Dupre, H. Mosier, J. A. McKinnis and G. Petrie); wreath, A. Zehnder and E. Wilson and crew; and sprays from Mr. and Mrs. T. McDougall, Mr. and Mrs. A. C. McDougall, The Sominic Family, Mr. and Mrs. Nick Houpelek, and others.

The acting as pallbearers were Messrs H. Mosier, T. Bission, J. Welch, R. Tierney, L. O'Reilly, and E. Grogan.

The sacrament of Holy Communion is to be celebrated at the United church service at Paschenburg by the pastor Rev. W. J. Huston at the morning service at 10.30 a.m. on Sunday morning next.

Plant diseases are responsible for a loss amounting to about $1,500,000 annually in the United States, according to estimates.

Mr. Roy Williams, of the Fabyan Pet. Co., returned from the coast on Monday and reports that work is to commence shortly on their No. 3 hole at Fabyan. Dave Orellie, their old hand-by, is to have charge of the drilling once more! Here's wishing them luck!

BIG INCREASE IN ALBERTA CROPS

ESTIMATE 90% WHEAT CUT, 15% THRESHED IN CENTRAL PART OF PROVINCE

EDMONTON—Central Alberta is rapidly completing the harvesting of a grain crop that is yielding 70 per cent more than last year with wheat of equal high quality, according to the final monthly crop report based upon estimates at 100 points.

With 90 per cent of the wheat cut and 15 per cent threshed. The average grain crop placed at 22 bushels as against a figure of 12 bushels an acre in the closing estimate of 1929.

Of the barley and oats 80 per cent has been cut. Due to the late harvest this year only one-third of the districts reported threshing got under way during the first week of September, while one-half reported a start this week with work general next week.

ONTARIO WILL SPEND $1,000,000 ON ROADS TO HELP EMPLOYMENT

TORONTO — A million dollars worth of new highway work to be undertaken this fall with the idea of relieving unemployment was announced Friday by Hon. George S. Henry, minister of highways for Ontario.

This work advertised Saturday comes to some 60 miles of grading and culverts, five miles of paving between St. Thomas and Port Stanley and two bridges at the Severn and east of Port Arthur.

MUCH HIGHWAY WORK TO BE DONE BY GOVT.

PREMIER SAYS ALBERTA IS AWARE OF EMPLOYMENT TROUBLE

Alberta is fully alive to the unemployment situation as it is developing for this winter and among other things, the government would be prepared to do considerable highway work this autumn in addition to the regular program, now nearing completion, according to Premier J. E. Brownlee.

With a report of a special committee appointed prior to leaving on his holidays to investigate the whole unemployment situation awaiting reading, the Premier stated that he was prepared to proceed with plans for coping with the unemployment situation and was also waiting to hear of the Dominion government's plans so that he could co-operate to the fullest extent.

The report of the special committee, consisting of representatives of the departments of agriculture, public works and finance, with view the provincial relief situation from two angles, namely, the possibility of providing work by means of construction of public works and conditions in rural areas where drought and had caused loss of crops and where actual relief might be necessary.

"We have given the matter some consideration and the minute we know just what the Dominion government is prepared to do and how much it is prepared to spend, the province can go right ahead," he said.

Hog briquets set in rubber and lint green are now being used as targets for portable miniature golf courses.

ALBERTA TO GET AN EXTRA $30,000

PROVINCE MAKES SATISFACTORY ARRANGEMENT WITH DOMINION

EDMONTON—Ninety thousand dollars came to the provincial treasury through the efforts of Premier Brownlee on his recent trip east. It represents a payment on the Alberta subsidy from the Dominion that had previously been withheld and thereby hangs a bit of federal-provincial history.

It seems that in the latter part of ex-Premier Greenfield's term of office a question was raised by the Dominion department of finance to the effect that through a clerical error an over-payment of some $300,000 had been made to the province on subsidy account the basis of population having been computed wrongly.

The provincial government protested at the time taking the ground that it was unfair to raise the question so long after the supposed mistake had been made. The matter was then dropped but in the early part of this year it was again brought up and a deduction of $90,000 made from the last subsidy payment. Further deductions were to be made from succeeding payments until the whole amount should be met.

With in the east this summer, Mr. Brownlee took up the matter with the finance department at Ottawa urging that an arbitrary reduction of this sort should not be made until there had been an opportunity to adjust the dispute by negotiation. If ultimately it should be found that the province was in the wrong, its payment should then be adjusted in such a way, the premier claimed as not to embarrass the province's standing. Hon. R. B. Bennett agreed to this position and promised a refund which has now come forward.

Miss Doris and Martin Johnston of Paschenburg are staying in town for the winter to enjoy the privileges of the high school tuition.

Miss Walker, Coleman Is New Hospital Supt.

TRAVELS 5000 MILES TO ATTEND C.W.N.A. MEETING

Delegates of the Canadian Weekly Newspapers Association convention held last week in the Nova Scotian Hotel at Halifax were extended the privilege of visiting the Evangeline country, following the business session held their convention. The delegates visited Grand Pre at Cape Blomidon and exclaimed upon the beauty of the scene.

Among the interesting delegates to the convention was J. D. Skinner, of the Whitehorse Star, of Whitehorse Yukon Territory. In going to Halifax he travelled from Whitehorse to Skagway by rail, from there to Vancouver by Canadian National Steamship and from Vancouver to Halifax by Canadian National Railway, covering a distance of approximately five thousand miles.

AUSTRALIANS RETURNED HOME VIA CANADA

A party of 11 Australians on their way home after a visit to Europe, last week travelled across Canada via the Canadian National Railways. They crossed the Atlantic on the "Tuscanian" and left this week for Australia from Vancouver. They were in Jasper Park last week and went through Wainwright.

ALBERTA GOVERNMENT OPEN NEW BRANCHES

SUPERVISOR OF NEW OILS BRANCH HAS NOT YET BEEN ANNOUNCED

Drastic changes in the administration of the department of the government dealing with mining and oil lands are not anticipated by the provincial government when they take over control of the natural resources of the province of Alberta on Oct. 1, Premier J. E. Brownlee informed a delegation from the Calgary board of trade, which interviewed him during the week.

Organization of the new branches under the department of natural resources was progressing, and the mines branch was the only one which had not been fairly well decided upon. He said publicly that the members of the present mines staff would not likely be reduced the only change likely being the branch head.

Realizing the importance of the oil industry in the future of the province, it is being emphasized that the provincial government will place in the supervisory capacity a man who is familiar with the work and will not only work harmoniously with the oil operators, but give the province the efficiency which the position demands.

The name of Roy Gibson, who has been assistant deputy minister of the interior at Ottawa has been suggested as likely to be connected with the new department.

The new branches will be: Mines, water power, lands, forestry, and fisheries. One each of these there will be a supervisor, or two, when necessary.

No immediate drastic changes in the regulations regarding mines and oil lands were in contemplation. It could be assumed from the official utterances of the premier that while the centre of administration of the new department would be located at the capital, that there would be offices of the mines branch situated throughout the province—Western Examiner.

SUPERINTENDENT HUXLEY & NURSE LEDINGHAM GIVEN EXTENDED LEAVE

A special meeting of the Wainwright municipal hospital board was held on September 3rd last when Chairman Lewis and Trustees Chesterman and Jackson were in attendance.

This meeting had been called for the purpose of appointing a successor to Miss Huxley, the superintendent, who has been granted an extended leave of absence for the purpose of continuing post graduate work. Applications were on file from Miss Walker, Coleman; Miss Terry, Bentley; Miss Nelson, Provost; and Miss Campbell, Edmonton.

Trustees Knowles and Santer who were unable to be present, both forwarded their choice in writing to the secretary.

After a very full discussion of the matter it was moved by Trustee Jackson—that Miss Walker be given the appointment during Miss Huxley's leave of absence at a salary of $100 per month and that the chairman be authorized to phone Miss Walker to that effect and request that she come to Wainwright not later than September 29th prepared to assume charge on October 1st next and also that the secretary confirm the appointment to Miss Walker by letter—Carried.

The meeting then adjourned.

In the evening of the same date a regular meeting of the Board was held with the same Trustees present and after the minutes of the previous regular and special meeting had been confirmed on a motion by Trustee Jackson.

The House committee reported bills and accounts amounting to $1569.88 and recommended payment of same.

Moved by Trustee Chesterman—That the report of the House committee be adopted and cheques issued to cover the several amounts—Carried.

Moved by Trustee Jackson—That a cheque for $95.00 be drawn in favor of Miss Huxley as purchased during of Chesterfield sale which the several nurses had themselves furnished for use in their parlor—Carried.

Moved by Trustee Chesterman—That the next regular meeting of the Board be held at 8.30 on the usual date of meeting—Carried.

The Board then adjourned.

It might be well to point out to our readers that from information received we learn that Miss Huxley will probably be away for some months, and that Miss Huxley (who is being replaced during her absence by Miss M. Frowse) has been granted leave of absence for a period of eight months. Both of these young ladies will be taking post graduate courses in hospital and medical work, and we are sure their friends in Wainwright and district will wish them all success in their worthy project. Their leave will commence as and from October first.

LOCAL NOTES

A large barn for the use of the park riders is being erected at Rockyford, south of Fabyan by the Buffalo Park authorities.

The ten rounds of boxing between Curley Kid and Kid Holmdahl at the theatre on September 30th promises to be "some show" and a nice lot of preliminaries are being arranged to round out the evening.

Sunday, September 28th is the date chosen for the Rally Day services at St. Andrew's (Pres.) church and on October 12th the annual harvest Thanksgiving services will be held there both morning and evening.

AN IMPORTANT CROP

The rapid increase in its use for human food and medicinal purposes makes the barley crop one of growing economic importance. Cereals of the Dominion Department of Agriculture state that barley to the extent of upwards of 140,000,000 pounds is used annually as food or in medicines. As food it takes the form of barley food, cream of barley, pearl or pot barley as well as being used in its natural state. It is particularly valuable in some form of malt in proprietary medicines because of its faculty for turning the starches of foods into maltose, a form of sugar making them more readily assimilable.

Mr. Fenning's Wardrobe

"My husband!" She decided to be frank. "And maybe you don't know that a great many detectives are looking for you."

"Incredible. Nobody's ever looked for me. He showed her the face of a puzzled philosopher."

"And what for?"

"Well, you've got one pair. 'Yes,' she said solemnly. 'You're really, truly in earnest?'"

"Dreadfully. I'm something of an inventor. I've been working on a Fourth of July novelty—a sort of parachute you send up with a paper cap. Does it sound silly to you?"

"I don't believe in fireworks for children," said Maud. "But it doesn't sound silly."

"My brother thought it was sailing. I'm afraid we quarreled over it. I lost some money for him a few years ago on a patent Roman candle. That was the time he handed me the trousers and told me I was crazy. Poor silly I am."

"No, you're not. She was serious. 'Crazy people, you know, never admit it. But you're not very practical. Why did you quit your boardinghouse with out leaving any address?'"

"I was behind with my board. I'm really ashamed of getting out like that. But Mrs. Fortescue was unreasonable. I promised to pay with the first money I made on my novelty parachute. Suddenly he eyed her keenly. 'What do they want with me?'"

"They found finger-prints on the wall," said she, "and they'd kind of like to know if they're yours."

"Did my brother put them up to that?"

"Rollo's scholastic palor deepened to crimson."

"Detectives are so suspicious," she explained, "and listen to me. I know very well that you didn't commit that crime. Then why don't you go right around to your brother—"

"Never." He wrinkled the small chin of a stubborn man.

"Why not?"

"I'll not see him for a year. I told him so when we quarreled. I never go back on my word."

"Then came a saving inspiration. 'I think you're foolish. But you'll do me a favor won't you. I mean, my husband works so hard chasing false clues. And if he only had the finger-prints—'"

"I don't know your husband. This sounded unpromising until he added, 'But I should love to do you a favor because you're the only original detective I ever heard of. I like your method. Just walking up to people and telling them about it.'"

"Bearing now, he plunged into his seaty coat and brought out a seedy envelope. 'This has my name on it. I'd better put down my address in case your husband wants it.' He scribbled with a pencil; then, going to the seedy railing around the janitor's entrance, rubbed his fingers over the surface, pressed them firmly on the envelope, banded it to her."

"Oh, thank you so much," said Maud. "They're perfectly lovely. Hector'll be tickled to death. Well, goodbye. And good luck to your parachute."

"Thank you Mrs. Hector." He removed his dusty hat and vanished into the cheap brown building.

Hector, it seemed was getting desperate. He paced up and down excitedly. Cheever says something's got to happen in twenty-four hours or I'm off the job, he announced.

"Hector!" Maud felt like crying. "I wonder if his fingerprints would do any good?"

"Mr. Cheever's? Don't be silly. No, I mean Rollo Fenning's. Because I've got them."

"What?" Like an explosion. He snatched the envelope from her hand and scrutinized it. "Where in the world did you get this?"

"She told him and wondered if he was 'learning.' He sat by the table, closely comparing the prints with the photographed ones."

"That makes it worse," he said at last with a desperate sigh. "These prints don't match up at all. He probably worked with a confederate."

"I think Rollo is a dear," said she. "And he is just as innocent as I am. But because Hector still looked so severe. 'Or maybe I'm not innocent. Honey did I do wrong, talking with Rollo like that?'"

"No. But you're mad at me." "After all, Doll, he admitted, you are an amateur. You meant all right."

But you went at it the wrong way. We were preparing to close in on him in a systematic way. And now you've put him in his guard. You've spoiled everything."

She was miserable. Twenty-four hours to find one hundred and eighty-six suits and sixty-six pairs of extra trousers. And all this was up to Hector. Poor pig-headed darling. And he'd accused her of spoiling his star case.

She left home and walked—and tried to think. Presently she came to a halt and studied a four-story brick house on the opposite side of the street. J. Wilbur Fenning's house.

Almost superstitiously she regarded it, drawing her amateur conclusions. The clothes had gone through the roof perhaps. There was an apartment-house window less than twelve feet above. But this had been boarded up, as if to resist the very thief who had plagued Mr. Fenning.

A man with a fierce black mustache eyed her keenly. 'Detectives' written all over him,' she informed herself.

For Maud, in her blindness, had made a decision. Hector had called her an amateur and that still rankled. But hadn't Rollo said that very morning that she was the only original detective he had ever seen?

Maud had theories. Home-made amateurish theories which somehow scared her. 'I know that's it,' she kept telling herself for encouragement, and hoped that Hector would not catch her again in mischief. But she wasn't going to see him lose his job merely because he had a System.

"Too excited to be nervous, she took a taxi to a small but opulent tailor shop near Vanderbilt Avenue. A glazed partition at the back was labeled, 'Mr. Hark,' and through an open door she could see a well-groomed leg bending below a dark chair.

An ogreish leg. 'I'm scared blue,' she told herself, and walked in and faced him.

Worse than she had expected. A red-faced, spectacled, gigantic person dressed formally as a bridegroom, sat poring over his books. He didn't even look up, just glowered at the figures on his desk.

"I didn't want to disturb you, Mr. Hark," she explained rapidly. "Really I didn't. But you see this business about Mr. Fenning's clothes—"

"You're from the Cheever Bureau?" 'I'm connected with it. She felt easier now. "You see, my husband's on the case, and he's got to finish it up right away. So I decided to come to you and ask you why you stole Mr. Fenning's clothes."

"What sort of nonsense is this," his voice was low.

"Now don't try to pretend, Mr. Hark. I've got some finger-prints you might look at."

"What sort of nonsense is this," his voice was low.

"Now don't try to pretend, Mr. Hark. I've got some finger-prints you might look at."

"You've from the Cheever Bureau?" 'I'm connected with it. She felt easier now. "You see, my husband's on the case, and he's got to finish it up right away. So I decided to come to you and ask you why you stole Mr. Fenning's clothes."

for an apartment while the people are away."

"The boarded windows right over Mr. Fenning's?"

"This seemed to make no impression so deep was Mr. Hark in his own undoing. 'Uncle William is old and deaf and not very bright. I asked him if he would mind storing my overstock of clothes.'"

"So they're there?"

"Please let me finish. I waited till Uncle William's lodge-night—he usually stays quite late—then I opened the shutter on the window. It's on hinges and easy to work. It wasn't much trouble to swing down on a rope to Mr. Fenning's roof. I knew the public-scaffold surface wouldn't show tracks. And the scuttle, leading down to the attic, hadn't been locked. He stopped and rubbed his tired head."

"And you got into his bedroom?"

"It was deserted. His valet, you see is dead. I went through the pockets and took all his little valuables on his dressing table. I'm not a thief, you see. With a look of pallid supplication."

"No, I suppose you're not exactly. She considered his status. 'You're just very enterprising. You only put Mr. Fenning's clothes in storage with Uncle Bill.'"

"That was it. I intended to get them back to him—and he'll have enough to last him the rest of his life."

Mr. Hark continued to pour out his story without urging. The second job was easier than the first, practice making perfect. He watched Mr. Fenning leave for the opera, then he heard Uncle William with a musical comedy ticket. This time Mr. Fenning handed the bundles derrick fashion up through the window."

"But what did you do the third time I mean with all those detectives nosing around the house?"

"They made it easier for me. One of them had brought a chair on the roof and went to sleep. The servants were giving a party for the other detectives downstairs. The one on the roof had left the scuttle open. Somewhat sadly Maud thought of Hector's assistance."

"I intended to make that my last job, Miss. Mr. Fenning mumbled. 'I have used up all Mr. Fenning's clothes. Now I can meet my creditors. Then he seemed to melt into a helpless mass. 'I'm not defending myself. You can take me away.'"

"Sorry for him, she almost laughed. 'Look here, Mr. Hark. Mr. Fenning doesn't want to arrest anyone unless he gets mad—and he's growing sorer every minute. Now I've got you at my mercy, haven't I? I mean, with these finger-prints and all. Well, I'll make a bargain. No police, no handcuffs, no jail, no nothing. But you've got to promise. Hold up your hand—the right one.'"

"And when he complied: 'If you were so smart about taking Mr. Fenning's clothes away, you can put them back again so all the won't know it. You promise to do that?'"

"I promise. Only you're so clever. Miss, that I wonder if you could help me."

"Put back the clothes?"

"Well, yes. I could work so much faster."

"I don't know how you could be improved," she said. "But let's see. Give me a paper, will you? And a pencil. We'd better start planning this crime right now."

So they planned.

Restoring property is as dangerous as taking it. Mr. Hark had just let down the just back containing a dozen pairs of remarkable plus-fours. Even in her heartiness Maud could not help admiring their eye-splitting coloration.

"You like them?" It was a gentle voice at the door. Caught. Caught red-handed in her criminal benevolence. And restraining an impulse to faint and have done with it, she held a figure which could have been none other than Mr. Fenning's own.

"Oh, you're Mr. Fenning!" She had put on her fairest smile. "You came in so suddenly."

"It was sudden," said Mr. Fenning. His eyes reviewed the sartorial army marshaled before him.

"Young lady, what are you doing here?"

"Putting back your clothes. A hundred and eighty-six suits and sixty-six pairs of trousers. I've counted them. Right?" She faced him.

"Do you think I'm a burglar?"

"It's only reasonable to suppose," he replied, "that when your house has been robbed three times and you find a strange young lady, no matter how attractive, looking over your clothes."

"Isn't it reasonable to think, with a house full of detectives, that one of 'em might be a woman?"

"Ah, so that's it. I beg your pardon. Of course, it was such a surprise, my clothes coming back—"

"Wasn't it? And it's such attractive clothing, Mr. Fenning?"

"I'm glad you like it. He was beaming. "But it's got on my nerves this affair—"

"Don't let it worry you any more, Mr. Fenning. You'll never be bothered again."

Mr. Fenning was amused. "I think you ought to tell me who took all the trouble for nothing. You know—heartily—I rather suspect ed my brother."

"You'll never know from me," replied Maud. "And I'll bet you'll never find out. If you do, ring me up."

"Thank you, I shall."

She had acted, judging this an ideal point at which to close the conversation. "Well, good night, Mr. Fenning."

"I'll take you to the door, if I may"

He paused. "I'm ever so grateful to you. You did it in such a nice way."

This was her opportunity. "Would you do me a little favor, if you're really grateful?"

"Thousands of them!" He was more than glib.

"Don't mention me to Mr. Cheever when you pay the reward."

"But why not? You—"

"We detectives are not supposed to be individuals. It makes Mr. Cheever"

WORLD'S GRAIN EXHIBITION

Rules and regulations governing entries in the competitive classes of the World's Grain Exhibition and Conference to be held in Regina July 25 to August 6 1932, have now been prepared and are available upon application from the office of the Secretary Imperial Bank Building, Regina, Sask. The World's Grain Exhibition is open to world-wide competition and any grower in any part of the world may be an exhibitor. The regulations now issued point out that with regard to type and quality exhibits in each class should consist of seed of a type and quality capable of reproducing a product of the most desirable character for the purpose intended. "General quality and appearance alone is not sufficient" to quote the rules "Exhibitors should keep in mind the fact that breeding will be taken into consideration".

The rules also state that each exhibitor will be allowed to make entry in as many classes as he may desire but not more than one entry may be made in any one class. Entries may be taken from any year's crop. There being no restriction regarding the year in which the exhibit is grown. Applications for entry must be made on forms provided for this purpose and mailed to the Secretary, World's Grain Exhibition and Conference, Regina, Sask.

Included in the rules and regulations is the following: Important notation: "Exhibitors must be the bona fide property of the exhibitor and must have been grown by him and bear the variety name in classes which call for this provision".

NEW COLORS IN GARMENTS

CALL FOR YELLOW GOLD

Upon the advent of this vogue for yellow gold comes color in garments which blend beautifully with this metal. New shades of wine red, black and purple, browned greens, and blue reds with the clear colors and range of browns indicate a most practical demand for romantic types of brackets and necklaces, old pins and clips. Short haired furs such as mink, lapin, mink, sable; long-haired furs of lynx and fox are being dyed in contrast and harmony, with blackened colors and clear tones to be used for face coverings.

Velvet, tulle, uneven brims and nois, off-the-face effects in millinery lend themselves to impressive color combinations in jewel neckwear. Definite lines, sturdy character and large or ornamentation seem to be the trend.

New chiffons in afternoon and evening frocks, luminous satins and up-trimmed garments leave a wide-open opportunity for shoulder decorations in angular and circular effects of sweep and proportion without heaviness.

That color mass and line of design more than intricate detail is the new acceptance was an opinion expressed by a prominent designer.

Dress skirts still being full set on banded hip lines of triangular motifs with the new below the hip coat, which flares above the knee for daytime wear, and below the knee for evening wear, and the rather expressive high collar and the elbow length fur cuff on the dressy ensemble all offer much for the designers of jewel accessories.

The universal feeling for impressive and positive design is already showing in both the French and American markets. Creators both here and abroad have introduced the streamlining and romantic suggestion rather than intricacy of pattern.

This theme, while modern in treatment, is a reflection from the period of Grecian line and feminine charm. It is a bit new and very interesting to watch how the designer will develop his themes in the modern manner just as the modern woman has adjusted her acceptances to the new neck and waist line in garments so will she adapt the correct bracelet or necklace for her costume.

The uses for the large disc-like shoulder pin and the new treatment of the clip ornament which may be used to accent the severe evening gown, are items which should not be overlooked.

Since Paris accepts black and purple for daytime this sets the vogue for pearls, crystals and amethysts, Rich brown costumes with self-toned furs are made distinctive by the romantic topaz in necklace and bracelet. Bronzes and dark greens accent the use of emerald, yellow gold and jade. The uses of sheer chiffons and cluster satins for evening emphasize the renewed importance of the ruby.

WE GET OUR SHARE

Less than ten per cent of the world's population reside in the United States, but this group manages to consume almost one-half of the world's output of coffee and over one-fifth of the sugar.

For as raw silk, our women and girls see that, almost three-quarters of the world's output is used to adorn various portions of their attractive bodies. Not to be outdone, Dad and Harold Teen gobble up somewhere around three-quarter of the automobiles.

And yet we have a few thousand worried-looking writers who use up millions of pages in our papers and magazines telling us how terrible conditions are. They almost have some of us young chaps believing that, but grandpa remembers 40 or 50 years back and stily wrinkles his left eye.

ON TIME

Now that the school calls at 9 o'clock every morning, in many a home both city and country, there is a grand and glorious scramble and rush to get the children off on time. Some boys and girls never do acquire that most valuable of habits—punctuality—and they go through life trying to catch up and never getting there. Looking at lateness from the point of view of the teacher and classroom, it is one of the unpleasant and unpardonable annoyances that take the joy out of the day.

Looking at it from a health standpoint, the child with his breakfast bolted and his appetite unimpaired

IT'S WISE TO CHEVROLET CHOOSE A SIX

2,000,000
Six-Cylinder Chevrolets
now on the road

SINCE January, 1929, Chevrolet has produced and sold over 2,000,000 six-cylinder automobiles—nearly five times as many as any manufacturer of sixes has ever built in an equal length of time.

Such record-breaking public preference shows how buyers of low-priced cars are demanding the advantages of six-cylinder design. These 2,000,000 people decided on Chevrolet largely because of the following facts:

Chevrolet is Smoother

A six-cylinder engine is smoother, quieter, more flexible—free from annoying vibration—requires less gear-shifting. And Chevrolet gives you a dependable, 50-horsepower, six-cylinder power plant!

More Comfortable, Smarter

Chevrolet is the lowest-priced Six which offers you a rugged full-length chassis with modern semi-elliptic spring suspension—big bodies with forming seats—the style and luxury advantages of Body by Fisher.

Easy to Buy and Own

The Chevrolet Six is priced as low as $635, at the factory. And you will find it costs no more for operation or upkeep than any other car of comparable quality on the road. You may purchase through the G. M. A. C., General Motors' own deferred payment plan. The General Motors Owner Service Policy will safeguard your investment.

TOWN PLANNING IN THIS PROVINCE

Being a series of short articles explanatory of the provisions of the Alberta Town Planning Act and Regulations thereunder.

By HORACE L. SEYMOUR
Provincial Director of Town Planning

Article 2
The Subdivision of Lands by Registration of Plans
A subdivision has been and may be again the genesis of a city. Every subdivision as proposed deserves careful attention.

Regulations of the Department of Public Works regard to subdivisions of land include the provision: "all land to be subdivided shall be eminently suited for the purpose it is intended." and "should it appear that the whole or any part of the land proposed to be subdivided, is not in the public interest to be subdivided or offered for sale to the public" the registration of such subdivision can be refused. With certain exceptions 10 per cent of the total area of a subdivision being registered is to be set aside for public or park purposes; residential lots are to be at least fifty feet wide. For subdivisions outside of cities, towns, or villages, there must be registered a caveat, which is in effect a simple form of zoning bylaw classifying the use of lots for residential, commercial, industrial, or agricultural purposes until there be formed a village or town which can make its own zoning regulations.

It should be stressed that by the intelligent co-operation of the owner the surveyor and the government officials concerned, many mistakes of the past can be avoided. Tentative plans of proposed subdivisions as prepared by an Alberta surveyor should be forwarded to the Director of Surveys, Parliament Buildings, Edmonton. All such plans are also subject to the approval of the Provincial Town Planning Board, and to consideration by a local Town Planning Commission where appointed.

DID YOU EVER STOP TO THINK

By Edson R. Waite, Shawnee, Okla.

That there are two classes of people living in most cities; those who live in a city and are a living part of the city and those who live on a city, giving nothing in return. The city booster should not be discouraged because the public fails to appreciate his work.

The city booster must do his work expecting no gratitude, but plenty of knocks. He must be satisfied in knowing that he has done his duty. There is no use to wait for city-knockers to move, reform or die; they never do it. They are long-lived individuals and always on the job.

A city should whole-heartedly enter into the spirit of community development. Cities that put forth special efforts toward a closer spirit of community co-operation always cash in heaviest on the returns.

TELEPHONE TO ASSIST OPERATION OF CAR FERRY

The first two-way radio telephone system to be placed in operation by a railroad in order to establish contact between a car ferry and the mainland will go into operation shortly on the Canadian National Railway. The land end will be at Fordina, P.E.I., and will permit the chief train despatcher at Charlottetown to maintain direct and constant communication with the Captain of the Canadian National Car Ferry while it is plying back and forth between Borden and Tormentine, N.B. Two special Marconi 100-watt radio telephone transmitters with associated receivers will be operated on the ship by remote control from a desk in the Captain's day room, and on the mainland from the Agents' office at the Borden railway station. Both ends of the system will operate much in the same way as an ordinary line telephone system.

to headaches and dizzy spells and even my circulation was affected. I didn't have much faith in Sargon when I started it but it gave me a fine appetite and perfect digestion. I've quit having headaches and dizzy spells; my circulation has picked up and my whole system is strengthened. the operation being so simple that non-technical people could use the equipment without special training. As an aid to operating the wireless telephone will be a detailed asset, especially during the winter months when navigation is not easy. With a means of communication established, the captain will be able to advise the despatcher on shore of the approximate time of arrival and the handling of the personnel and rolling stock may be governed accordingly. Economy of time and equipment may thus be assured, operating officers of the railway say.

YOUR DOLLAR WILL

DO A BIGGER JOB

Confidence and Normal Spending Present-Day Basis of Prosperity

Turn to the advertising columns of this paper. Observe the lower prices on nearly every article in many lines of our merchandise. The quality is the same as it was when the prices were at their peak. Service hasn't changed. It's simply a new day for the buying dollar, a new day brought on by a general economic adjustment to lower levels. The merchant today is offering his goods to the public at much lower prices. Are you taking full advantage of these low prices? The critically unstable conditions of last November have been brought to a state of balance by the operation of sound principles of management, production and sales. The surplus of savings shows a notable increase. The public for months has been buying with marked conservatism. Permanent adjustment of lower price levels for merchandise can be established only through a corresponding increase in public confidence made evident in public confidence made evident now by rational buying to supply accumulated needs. Our return to full prosperity can be accelerated greatly by the immediate resumption of normal trade. Do your part, since that is distinctly to your advantage. Now is the time to buy. Let your dollar work for you when its work will be exceptionally fruitful. Today's shopping, furniture, dry goods and a host of other desirable commodities of nearly every description can be purchased most advantageously.

BERTRAND is a name of Teutonic origin meaning "bright." It's variant, Bertram, means "Bright raven."

ANNA is a name of Hebrew origin meaning "grace." It is derivative of Hannah. "Great Anna!" Whom three realms obey," wrote Alexander Pope of Queen Anne. Exponents of the Royal and Ancient Game went down to defeat on the Banff Springs Hotel golf course recently when Indian Archery experts played in a nine-hole foursome between two Indian chiefs, Lone Walker and Lone Eagle, and William Thompson, professional on the course, and his daughter, Peggy Dalgleish.

The Indians shot their arrows from the tee while the golfers played in orthodox fashion. The archers "holed in" a four-inch ball standing on end on the cup. Up to the ninth hole the game was tied, but the Indians won the latter with one stroke.

The Plumbers Opera, opening number presented at Banff Springs Hotel by the Alfred Heather Light Opera Company, that is running a summer season at the well-known Rockies resort, proved an unqualified success, while "Tom Tug, the Young Waterman," which followed it, was an even greater hit. The season will run during July and August and a number of 18th century operas with Gilbert and Sullivan and Canadian works will be given.

It just will happen even in the best of families

I get my telephone bill on the first of the month. And do I pay it promptly? Well, it's simply become a habit with me for these telephone people have mighty effective means of jolting you out of your lapses of memory. They simply cut off your telephone service. And that's that. And it's the same with the gas and electric light service.

But just let a newspaper publisher cut off a man's news supply because he's lapsed his subscription — and what a howl! It just isn't done, that's all. So a man can get a newspaper supply indefinitely, and Mr. Newspaper Publisher keeps on footing the bill.

But is it fair? — No! You can't run a successful business that way. Sooner or later the newspaper which continues sending out copies not paid for will go broke, and so we are forced to stop all unpaid subscriptions after November 1st. We are announcing it thus early, because we know it is hard to get the $2 now, but we ask you to kindly make provision for this account on or before November 1st, as no unpaid subscriptions will be sent out of this office after that date.

SPECIAL ASSISTANCE will be given to any person who has no cash available to pay his subscription but who wants to get the paper. This is an individual matter however and we ask all who desire such assistance to come to the Star Office and let us explain. The point is that in these hard times, we are prepared to see that no one goes without his paper provided he will make the necessary arrangements.

YOUR ATTENTION TO THIS MATTER AT THE EARLIEST MOMENT WILL BE APPRECIATED BY

CURING PORK

Temperature is an important factor in the home curing of pork, observe experts of the Dominion Department of Agriculture. The meat ceases to take salt when the temperature falls below 36 degrees Fahrenheit. Therefore, dry curing to be successful must be done in a room in which the temperature does not long remain below this point. In brine curing care must be taken to avoid fermentation which occurs when the temperature rises above 45 degrees F., and also to see that the temperature of the room does not drop below 35 degrees F. It is also well to freshen brine frequently as this tends to prevent fermentation. Detailed instructions in the home curing of pork and other meats is available free of charge on application to the Department at Ottawa.

The Outcast

The team, the young man declared bluntly.

Calvey turned slowly around. There was no change in his expression, but he seemed to have grown taller.

"I not only played Oxford, but I captained the team," he said quietly. "Then you did so under another name," the young man answered.

"Is that your business or mine?" Calvey asked, quietly.

There was a tense silence. The young man shrugged his shoulders and turned away. Calvey smote his hand far down the course, providing a little cry of delight from his partner. His opponent followed suit according to his capacity, and they all strode off together.

"You are really a delightful person to play golf with," Pamela declared cheerfully. "Remember please, that you are not to think of anything but the game until we have finished. We have to give them half a stroke, and I want to win."

"We will," Calvey asserted, but I must have my walk this afternoon."

"It shall be your reward," Pamela promised. They won five up and four. In the afternoon Calvey had his walk, they started out to climb the pine-wooded hill at the back of the hotel. Near the summit they paused. For some time they had not spoken. It was a silence which became more and more emotional.

"Sit down," he begged. Pamela obeyed him. The air was fragrant with the perfume of the pine trees and the land below sleepy and beautiful after the heat of the day.

"Do you know that you have been very kind to me these last days, Miss Wheeler?" he asked abruptly.

"Yes, I know it," she admitted. "Why?" he demanded. "Because I like you, she replied. Calvey leaned towards her. He had the appearance of a man placing himself under restraint.

"You have been very good," he said. "You see what I am, nearly forty years old a tired, worthless person, with no aim in life, no profession, and I drift on lazily down the stream. I had forgotten all the beautiful things; I did not even think I had any emotions left. Then you came."

Pamela half looked up and then away. "Do you mind, I wonder, if I talk to you like this?" he went on gravely. "It is hard for me to keep silence altogether. I think that you came when my very soul was poisoned with bitterness and loathing of the whole world. I hated even my life; and there were moments—"

Pamela's fingers held his. He smiled. "They will never come again," he promised. "Dear it is more wonderful to make a weary man feel than anything else in life. I caught a glimpse of you then, first day, watched you with your friends; I didn't understand why the sight of you seemed to fill me with vague regrets I found myself thinking of you. Do you know what it means to a morbid man when he finds his thoughts engrossed by some one else's life?"

Pamela raised her eyes and looked at him steadfastly. There was a new softness in her face, something wonderful.

"I think you are far too morbid," she declared. "You speak and think only of the present and the past. There is a future."

"That is what I dare not think of," he answered sadly. "A man who has missed his life, as I have done has no right to count upon the future."

"You are foolish," she whispered. "Heaven knows, I soon shall be if I stay here much longer," he replied a little wildly. "Female, can't you see—don't you understand—that my heart is full of things I must not dream of saying to you. Come!"

Pamela held her place obstinately. "What sort of things?" she whispered.

Calvey flung himself away from her, but returned almost at once.

"Little lady," he pleaded, "don't spoil my wonderful dream. You have made a little corner of fairyhood in my heart, a little treasure chamber into which I can creep sometimes when the black days come. Don't you force me to destroy it."

"But what about me," she whispered with a tremble in her voice.

"God forgive me!" he answered, and took her into his arms.

Through an unreal world they walked down the winding path to the hotel. There was the golden silence, the one tense period when the finger of the gods is laid upon the wheels of time. But the awakening came. A huge motor-car was discharging its load in front of the hotel—a funny little man with a huge fur coat, a loud voice, and many diamonds; a wife and children to match; an unpleasant crowd to look upon, but no table patrons of the hotel. Calvey half passed as he saw the man, then he walked firmly on with Pamela at his side.

The Goldbergs, she whispered. "Horrid people. They come every year and pay a fabulous price for their rooms. Whatever is the matter with the little man?"

Mr. Goldberg was suddenly excited. He caught hold of the hotel proprietor's shoulder and pointed to Calvey.

"Is that person staying in the hotel?" he demanded.

His raucous voice was audible to everyone around. Calvey came to a standstill before him. The contrast between the two men as they faced one another was absurd.

"If you are alluding to me, sir," he said, "I am certainly staying here. Have you any objections?"

Mr. Goldberg turned to the porters. "Stop unloading my trunks," he ordered. "Huber," he went on excitedly, "either that person leaves the hotel or I do not enter it. Which is it to be?"

The proprietor turned a bewildered face toward his angry patron.

"I do not understand sir!" he protested. "What is the objection to Mr. Calvey sir?"

HAPPY HOMES ---
AND ELECTRICITY

They used to say "woman's work is never done"—what with washing dishes, washing clothes, cleaning house, attending the children, in an endless wearying round, day after day. Back-breaking, health-destroying, youth robbing toil—the price of their great share in the world's work.

Thus our Mothers and Mothers' Mothers lived, until, after the capacity for enjoyment had gone, feebleness ended their labors.

How different today — by the aid of electrical equipment the housewife does an honest, man's size day's work and still has time for leisure and relaxation unmarred by fatigue. The children now enjoy more of Mothers' fretless, kindly care and domestic life has become a more hearty, happy comradeship.

What have you done to see that your home life is made easier, happier, fuller by the emancipation from needless toil that electricity gives?

A wide range of modern electrical appliances may now be purchased direct from the Calgary Power Company on a small down payment — balance to be paid with your regular monthly light bills.

"DO 'IM IN THE EYE"

In England the idiom, "Do 'im in the eye" expresses the scoring of a very signal victory. The "eye" is used because it represents the most prized of the senses—sight. It's peculiar commentary on human nature—that while a man will combat with his every resource the efforts of a fellowman to "do him in the eye," he will "do" himself more seriously without a thought.

Take for instance the neglect that the average man accords his eyes. He will strain and suffer with defective vision until the tortured nerves drive him to the Optometrist with head aches and other ailments.
